By the United Press
MERCER, Wis.—When he tried to feed his tame buck deer, M. V. Klack, farmer living near here, was severely mired and trampled by the animal. A farmhand heard his cries for help and killed the deer.

UNDERTAKERS REFUSE HEARSE
By the United Press
HULL, Eng.—Undertakers have refused to supply hearses for paupers' funerals because the city employs direct and not contracted labor to make coffins.

AUTO HANGS BY WHEEL
By the United Press
BRIMFIELD, Ind.—When John Sloop attempted to avoid a collision, he drove his auto through the railing of a train bridge and the machine was suspended 18 feet above a creek bed by one wheel. Sloop, his wife, daughter, and another couple were rescued, uninjured, by a motorist.

Home Nursing Hints
By Grace L. Smith, R. N.

MUSTARD PLASTERS When mustard is used dry it has no irritating effect, but when mixed with water, a chemical reaction takes place and changes it into an irritating volatile oil. When wet mustard is applied to the skin, the skin and the marked effect upon the circulation, surface as well as deep, so when the skin reacts to redness, the desired effect on the organ to which it is applied, has been produced. Mustard plasters are used to relieve congestion by counter-irritation with especially good results in pneumonia or any chest condition. To relieve pain in inflamed joints, to place generally over the abdomen for gas colic or pelvic congestion, and to aid in stopping nausea by placing the plaster directly over the stomach.

In preparing a mustard plaster, have all your materials for ready. Measuring cup, teaspoon, mixing bowl, mustin, knife for spreading, flour and mustard. The amount of mustard used depends on the type of skin and age of patient. Usually using the proportions of one part mustard to four or five parts flour for an adult, and one part mustard to ten or twelve parts flour for a small child. Mix thoroughly before adding water, and while water is being added, work into a medium thick paste. Have mustin cut in an oblong and on one side of the oblong, spread mustard paste, turning in corners of material, enveloping the entire plaster. Place the plaster, ready for use, on a hot water bottle to take the clammy feeling away before placing it on patient.

To Prevent Burning
As an added guard for safety, rub the area to which you are applying plaster with oil to prevent burning skin. The length of time necessary for a plaster to remain on depends again on the reaction of the skin, and it is wise to keep closely watching for too much redness. When the plaster is removed, again apply oil to the skin, and cover same with a soft towel to prevent soiling the patient's gown. Mustard plasters may be repeated every two or three hours depending upon the results desired. Remember this always, that mustard is quick to burn the skin, and if this happens it is inexcusable on the nurse's part. Prepared mustard plasters only require being placed in tepid water for a few moments, allowed to drip to remove the excess water and applied directly to the skin.

If you have any nursing problem which you need advice and immediate help, write Miss Smith and she will advise you. Address Miss Grace L. Smith, R. N., care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped addressed envelope.

Office Staff of Hatchery Enlarged

John Fetako, an experienced office man, has recently joined the staff of the Goddard Hatchery, 17591 South Normandie, to handle the large amount of correspondence and detail work coming up in the next few weeks. The Goddard Hatchery makes a specialty of shipping baby chicks, many of which are sold to poultrymen in other states and in distant points in California. This branch of the business will reach its highest point of volume for the year during the spring months.

Brighter Colors and More Daring Lines Demanded by the Junosque

By FRANCES PAGET
By the United Press
Makers of dresses for large women observe that the larger woman seems to be more reconciled to the proportions of her figure than in recent years and buyers of larger women's apparel are now demanding that modes should appeal to the eye even if it is necessary to sacrifice some of the long-held theories on what constitutes slenderizing lines. The demand for attractiveness is now affecting fabrics and colors also. It is especially significant, perhaps, that for the first time in many seasons, crepe dresses for larger women are now being shown in bright colors which have always been more or less taboo. High shades as well as red may be had in afternoon dresses. All this is most gratifying to the large army of women who have heretofore found difficulty in getting fitted in anything but "old lady clothes." Since our ladies themselves have disappeared from view, it seems rather absurd to impose an extra penalty on the "stylish stout" by making her wear a type of thing spurned by grandmas.

Bank Workers Get Big Bonus

A Christmas bonus of more than one-half million dollars, to be distributed to the employees of the Bank of America throughout California, is announced by E. J. Nolan, chairman of the bank's board. This Christmas bonus, which will be paid on December 15, is in addition to the extra compensation in excess of $1,500,000 which was distributed to former employees of the Bank of Italy on July 1. The bonus, which will be distributed on December 15, covers the five months period from July 1 to December 1, for employees of the former Bank of Italy, and the eleven months period from January 1 to December 1 for employees of the former Bank of America of California, these two banks having been combined to form the Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association. More than 8000 employees will participate in this Christmas bonus.
